New Year's Eve "Video Madness" Party by Peter Knapp

Come celebrate New Year's Eve at Rob and Peter's newly-renovated home in downtown DC. As usual, this will give us a chance to both recover from the hectic "holiday" season and to party some more in anticipation of the new year.

Here are the details on how to join in on the fun:

When? Thursday, December 31st (3:00pm to ??). The doors will open at 3:00pm. The potluck dinner and the videos will begin at the 4:30pm-5:00pm range.

What to Bring? Bring along your favorite genre videos and DVD's (science fiction, fantasy, horror). Attendees will vote on which movies will be shown at the party. (There'll be different concurrent "tracks" of programming in two or three different parts of the house.)

The party will, of course, include a potluck meal, so bring along something scrumptious to eat. We're not pre-assigning categories of what food to bring, so everyone should just bring something from one (or more) of the following "basic food groups": appetizers (veggies, chips, etc.), a main course item (enough to serve at least 4-5 people), dessert (of course!), non-alcoholic drinks (both regular and diet).

Reminder: Annual LSF Book Exchange Set for Jan. 11th Meeting

That's right, gang, the Holiday Season is almost upon us again; and it's time for a short reminder about Lambda Sci-Fi's upcoming fourteenth annual book exchange, which will occur at the January 11th meeting! All LSF members are invited to participate in this "blind book exchange" -- and visitors are invited to join in the fun, too!

Briefly, this will be an opportunity for LSFers to exchange copies of their favorite science-fiction, fantasy, or horror books/videos/etc. and, thus, get to know each other a little better. For those of you unfamiliar with the process, here's how it works: You won't be assigned to exchange books with any particular person - it's a "blind" exchange, where participants will get their pick from a pile of anonymous wrapped packages. There will be full details on the exchange in the next (January) LSF newsletter. Λ Ψ Φ

Next LSF Meeting - Dec. 14th -

The next Lambda Sci-Fi meeting will be held at James Crutchfield's apartment (1414 17th St., NW, #413) on Sunday, December 14th. The business meeting will begin at 1:30 PM; and the social meeting will begin at 2:00 PM. Please bring some munchies or soft drinks, if you can. See you there!

The LSF Book Discussion Group

If you're interested in lively discussions of F&SF books (with an emphasis on elements of interest to the LBGT community), we invite you to join the LSF Book Discussion Group. Each month, we conduct fascinating round-table discussions of works by significant F&SF authors.

The LSF Book Discussion Group generally meets on the 4th Thursday of every month, starting at 7:00 PM. However, the next meeting will be held on December 4th (a special combined November-December session).

While Peter & Rob's house is undergoing renovations, the LSF Book Discussion Group will meet at a new venue: Brian & Sean's condo: 1300 13th St. NW #108 (Solo Piazza Building, on the corner of 13th & "N" Streets). For directions or more details, call 202-968-8737.

Here's the schedule for the next couple of months:

- Dec. 4th (NOTE: special combined Nov.-Dec. discussion) - Fat White Vampire Blues by Andrew Fox; moderator: Keith.
- Jan. 22nd - Spin State by Chris Moriarty; moderator: Rob.
- Feb. 26th - Women Writing Science Fiction as Men, edited by Mike Resnick; moderator: Carl.

Hal Clement
1922-2003

(from Rob)

Another of our Greats passes.....

Harry Clement Stubbs, who under the pen name of Hal Clement wrote science fiction for sixty years and received SFWA's Grand Master Award in 1999, died in his sleep at his Milton, Massachusetts home on October 29, 2003, at age 81.

Author of a multitude of novels and stories over the course of 60+ years in the genre, Hal Clement was a regular fixture at conventions and in the community. I had the pleasure of meeting and interacting with Harry first through MITSFS (the MIT Science Fiction Society), whose annual picnic Harry tried to attend each year, and later through casual passing at conventions. He adored the universe, the people in it, the wonders it held, and I rarely saw him with anything less than a smile. He will be missed.

(from SFWA News)

Harry Clement Stubbs, who wrote science fiction as Hal Clement, died in his sleep earlier today, October 29, 2003, at his home in Milton, Massachusetts.

Born in 1922, Clement was a high school teacher whose fiction gained a reputation as quintessential hard SF – science fiction firmly based on established physics, chemistry, and astronomy. His novels often depicted highly-imagined alien worlds. The most famous was Mission of Gravity, set on a heavy, fast-spinning planet where the force of gravity is several times greater at the poles than at the equator. His last novel, Noise, was published earlier this year.

Clement was named a Grand Master by the Science Fiction Writers of America in 1999. Among his other honors was a Retro-Hugo Award in 1996 for his 1945 story "Uncommon Sense".

Clement is survived by his wife Mary, two sons George and Richard, daughter Christine Hensel, and grandson Jackson.

The "Secret" Minutes of the November LSF Meeting compiled by the Masked Stranger

LSF's long-standing Secretary, Scott, was unable to attend the November 9th meeting; and no one else ~~could~~ be coerced into agreed to accept the responsibility for taking minutes at the meeting. Consequently, what happened at the meeting that day is a Big Secret, and I'm not gonna tell you!!! Nyah, nyah, nyah!!!

Well, OK, maybe just this once...

Aside from all the typical nattering about this'n'that (books, movies, TV shows, etc., etc., etc.), a couple of significant items were decided.

(1) After a little research earlier that day, Peter and Rob reminded everyone that the LSF Charter requires that Officer nominations be made no later than the November meeting – with elections to follow at the December meeting. (YIKES!) The current slate of Officers – Michael C., Speaker; Rob, Treasurer; Peter, Membership Coordinator; Scott (in absentia, having previously told Peter of his intentions), Secretary – all agreed to volunteer to continue in their present Offices. As no other nominations were made – and no volunteers came forward – it was agreed that the current Officers would be reconfirmed by acclamation.

(2) With the imminent completion of their home renovations (Deo gratias!), Peter and Rob announced their intention to host an LSF "video madness"/New Year's Eve party. (For details, see the announcement beginning on the first page of this newsletter.)

Tha-tha-tha-tha-that's all, folks! (Hopefully, Scott will be able to attend the December LSF meeting and there'll actually be some minutes for the newsletter!)

Phobos

a short review by
Peta Joy Sosnowski

There's a new book coming out this month entitled Phobos, by Ty Drago; and it's one of the best stories I've read in a very long time. And as I've had quite some time on hand(s), I've been living with my nose in a book (I love the smell), so I would know.

Quickly, and with no spoilers: Mike Brogue is part cop and part soldier, and full Martian. As a prize for saving one of the powerful people on Mars from a terror kidnapping, he is given a choice of being stuck in a never-ending photo op or of getting sent to a research outpost on the moon Phobos, where something has started hunting the scientists. Guess what his choice is?

This is a truly great story with a little bit military, mystery, intrigue and a lot of just good old-fashioned SF— with a hostile lifeform thrown into the mix, just for that special added flavor. I got a jump on everybody when I had the chance to read the advanced, uncorrected proof (a bit of bragging here), but I'll be out to buy the book. As the author lives very near to me in NJ, I think there's a good chance I can get it signed.

My advice - Go get it!

Scarlet Street

by Mike Cornett

Many have heard me talk about this magazine. Scarlet Street: The Magazine of Mystery and Horror is a very fun mag devoted to classic horror and mystery films and TV. (And fiction, to a lesser degree.)

Scarlet Street is also a very gay-slanted magazine; the publisher, Richard Valley, and the Managing Editor, Tom Amorosi, are a couple—and quite a fun one too! They were guests at a Gaylaxicon a while ago and also appear at numerous East Coast conventions (mostly horror ones).

Anyway, the reason I'm talking about it now is that I got the new issue today and it's probably their gayest yet. Articles in the new issue include:

— "Attack of the Horror Hags," about movies like Whatever Happened to Baby Jane? and other horrors with aging screen divas like Bette Davis, Joan Crawford, and Olivia de Havilland.

— "Screamers, or Cute Boys in Their Underpants Drop Dead," about the gay-oriented horror films of deadguyscinema.com, which feature all sorts of scantily-clad young men in peril.

— "Muscling in on the Movies," an overview of the Italian Hercules films, including a rare nude photo of 50's gay heartthrob Steve Reeves.

— "From Muscle Beach to the Movies: Mark Forest," an interview with the 60's beefcake heartthrob, including his address so fans can write to him!

— "Great Scott!: Gordon Scott," an interview with an actor who played both Hercules and Tarzan.

— "From Muscle Beach to the Movies: Reg Lewis," an interview with the 1957 Mr. Universe, who went on to make a number of movies.

— and a bunch more of fun stuff. Check it out!

Ed. Note: Mike's short article first appeared in the on-line LSF discussion group. In a reply, Randy Bell provided Scarlet Street's website, which is: <http://www.redcirclellc.com/index.html>

Star Trek x 3 = ?

reviews by Carl Cipra

As with any category this broad, I've found "Star Trek literature" to be a pretty mixed bag. I've read almost a dozen Star Trek books – by various authors – and I can't say that reading them has been an unalloyed pleasure. Yes, I really enjoyed a couple of 'em – specifically: Steve Barnes' incredible "expanded novelization" Far Beyond the Stars (based on the DS9 TV episode about Benny Russell, the black sci-fi pulp writer); and Captain Proton: Defender of the Earth by D.W. "Prof." Smith (a campy pulp-style story based on Tom Paris' Voyager holo-deck adventures). On the other hand, I found some Trek books to be utter disappointments. (I'm a big fan of Julia Ecklar's works; but I can't say that I'd recommend her "classic Trek" novel, The Kobayashi Maru, to anyone as an indication of just how good a writer she is. And I consider my reading of Jeri Taylor's novel, Unification, to have been a waste of time, since it provides nothing beyond what you'll see in the 2-part TNG episode – I'd been hoping for some further insights into Romulan society.) Others – such as Diane Duane's Dark Mirror [TNG]; Melissa Scott's Proud Helios [DS9] and The Garden [Voyager]; and S.N. Lewitt's Cybersong [Voyager] – I'd rate as anywhere from "pretty good" to "just OK".

Having said that, I ended up taking three Star Trek novels along with me on a recent work-related trip. I just thought I'd let you know what I think about 'em.

Uhura's Song by Janet Kagan (1985)

This one's been buried in my "to read" pile for quite a while. I bought a used copy of Uhura's Song several years ago after reading – and enjoying! – Kagan's Hellspark (Meisha Merlin Press). I had really enjoyed the way Kagan handled non-alien cultures and personalities in Hellspark and decided to give her earlier work a try. (If you're interested, I reviewed Hellspark in the May 1999 issue of the LSF newsletter.)

Uhura's Song is an example of a "non-canonical" Star Trek story – i.e. it's not a story from any of the TV series or movies. It's a novel that uses familiar Star Trek characters to tell a science fictional story. In the case of Uhura's Song, Kagan uses "Classic Trek" characters.

A deadly plague has broken out among the cat-like sentients of the planet Eeiauou; and the USS Enterprise has been sent in an attempt to find a cure. Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be a cure and humans are succumbing to the plague, too – in fact, several of the Enterprise crew have been infected. The only hope would seem to be encoded within the secret traditional songs of the Eeiauouans, songs that Uhura learned from an Eeiauouan diplomat she befriended many years ago. Now, Enterprise is flashing across the galaxy in a race against time to find a cure on a mythical Eeiauouan homeworld – before the plague spreads to more Federation planets.

Not a bad little book. Although I didn't find Kagan's handling of the cultures of the feline Eeiauouans and Sivaoans to be as expert as her handling of alien cultures in Hellspark, it was still well done. Interestingly, Kagan has also woven an archetypal "Trickster" figure into this story – an intriguing plot device that I can't go into without spoiling the story; and, frankly, I'm still of two minds as to whether I like the way she handles it. This book will probably be difficult to find – I think it's been out of print for years.

Star Trek x 3 = ?

Garth of Izar
by Pamela Sargent and George Zebrowski (2003)

This is the novel that actually got me going on this recent Star Trek kick. Garth of Izar is what I'd call a "continuing story" type of Star Trek novel – it takes a character from one of the Trek episodes/movies and tells you "what happens next" (or "what led up to this"). Garth of Izar, obviously, tells "what happens next" to Captain Garth ("LORD Garth!!!"), the shape-shifting madman that Kirk and Spock encountered on their visit to the Federation rehabilitation asylum on Elba II (in the episode entitled "Whom Gods Destroy"). I'd found Garth (as portrayed on TV by the late Steve Ihnat) to be a fascinating character – and Sargent and Zebrowski are pretty well-known SF authors – so when I saw this novel on the stands, I decided to give it a try.

Garth has seemingly been cured of his madness; and Starfleet Command has been debating what to do about him. Garth was, after all, a tactical military genius and a war hero – but then there's that period of insanity and the uncertainty of whether he's actually cured. Should Starfleet give him his rank back, give him a command, bury him in a desk job somewhere, or retire him outright? In the meantime, Garth has alerted Starfleet about a secret plot by the Antossians (the secretive race that originally taught him their shape-shifting abilities) and has offered his services in exposing their plans. Still not certain of what to do with him, Starfleet Command assigns Captain

Kirk, Commander Spock, and the rest of the crew of the USS Enterprise to assist Garth on this mission – and to keep an eye on Garth, should he in fact still be insane.

On the whole, I wasn't overly impressed with this one. The plot twists centering around the uncertainty of Garth's mental status were handled well; but, considering what was done with Odo and the Founders in DS9, I expected the culture of the shape-shifting Antossians to be handled better. Ah, well, I guess I'll just have to rate Garth of Izar as another of those "just OK" Trek novels.

Vulcan's Heart
by Josepha Sherman and Susan Shwartz (1999)

I've always been intrigued with the contrasting societies and cultures of the planet Vulcan and the Romulan Empire, so I decided to read this one despite my previous disappointment with Jeri Taylor's novelization Unification.

Vulcan's Heart is what I'd call a "linking story," one that connects events that occur in one or more Trek TV episodes or movies – or, if you prefer, a "fill in the gaps" story that tells you what happened between various episodes/movies. In the case of Vulcan's Heart readers are provided with links between the classic Trek episode "The Enterprise Incident" and the TNG episodes "Yesterday's Enterprise" and the two-part "Unification". The major characters in Vulcan's Heart include: Ambassador Spock; Commander Saavik (Spock's former protege, ); Lieutenant Jean-Luc Picard of the USS Stargazer; Ambassador Sarek (Spock's father); Admiral Leonard McCoy; Senator Pardek of Romulus (from "Unification") and Commander Charvanek (the unnamed Romulan Commander, from "The Enterprise Incident"); and Captain Rachel Garrett and Lieutenant Richard Castillo of the USS Enterprise, NCC-1701-C (from "Yesterday's Enterprise"). The story begins with the betrothal of Spock and Saavik on Vulcan (an event not previously shown anywhere else) and culminates with the Battle of Narendra III (as shown in "Yesterday's Enterprise").

For years, Spock has been researching his theories of the origins of Romulan civilization as an offshoot of Vulcan civilization; and he has dreamed of healing that ancient rift between the two branches of the Vulcan-Romulan race. The authorities on Vulcan, however, have studiously ignored him. Therefore, to advance both these projects, Spock plans to secretly visit the Romulan capital and contact the leaders of a growing dissident movement. Meanwhile, Dralath, the ambitious new Romulan Praetor is plotting to overthrow the Emperor and assume personal control of the Romulan Star Empire – using a sneak attack against an unarmed Klingon outpost as the first step to garner support for his regime. Spock's life becomes increasingly imperiled as the political pot boils over on Romulus, while the lives of his friends – and of his bride-to-be, Saavik – are endangered by the interplanetary cold-war-gone-hot.

I rather liked Vulcan's Heart. Sherman and Shwartz do a nice job of bringing together the elements of various disparate TV episodes and melding them harmoniously. They've also managed to "stay true" to the characters and to the overall "feel" of the Trek universe. Not exactly Hugo or Nebula Award material, but nicely done nevertheless. (FYI: The same authors had previously co-written another Trek novel, Vulcan's Forge [1998], which I haven't read. It's apparently a stand-alone novel about another period of Spock's life, not part of a "series," as such.)
